LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION

RE: Computer Science Instructor

George Corser

To Whom It May Concern,

It is with genuine enthusiasm that I recommend George Corser for the position of Computer Science Instructor. George taught the following courses: Web Security and Ethics (CS280), Windows Security (IS3340), Introduction to Programming (IT104), Client Side Web Scripting (CS111), Programming in Java II (IT219), Open Source Programming (CS250), and Business Concepts for Application Developers (CS140). From my observations of his teaching in the classroom, George demonstrated a passion for each topic and delivered the courseware to the students at their level of understanding, and proceeded to challenge the students to grasp the course materials with proficiency. George was very effective and excelled at teaching, and we were pleased to have him on staff with us here at ITT Technical Institute in Troy, MI.

George also participated in teacher training and assisted the IT program chair during student orientation. He sometimes substituted for other teachers on very short notice. One time he manned a booth to demonstrate mobile computing concepts to potential students. In other words, George not only performed his basic duties but he also demonstrated a willingness to help with whatever the rest of the team needed to be done.

Based on my direct experience observing his teaching, and based on student reports of his ability and enthusiasm, I endorse George for a college level teaching job.

Sincerely,

Ruth Clayman
